PLEASE WRITE FOR CONSTABLE'S SPRING LIST

LONDON

MR. NASH has just published an important new work entitled

THE LIFE OF THE EMPEROR FRANCIS JOSEPH

By FRANCIS GRIBBLE. 16s. net.

There exists no life of the Emperor Francis Joseph, and no History of Austria, in which the personal and political aspects of the subject are considered in their relation to each other. In this important new biography we have not only the picture of a great and successful ruler, but also of a brave old man maintaining the mediæval majesty of royal caste at a time when certain members of his House—one Habsburg after another—were, by their insurgent extravagances, moving the Courts and Chancelleries of Europe to consternation.

Cromwell, it will be remembered, insisted that the artist should paint him "warts and all," and if the life of an Emperor is not to be written in that spirit, one might just as well refrain from doing it, for there would be nothing to be learnt from it when it was written. Mr. Gribble's object is neither depreciation nor flattery, but truth—as much of the truth as is available—and his life of Francis Joseph should rank as one of the most honest biographies in the language.

PUBLISHERS AND SPRING
ANNOUNCEMENTS.

SOME of our contemporaries have tried to exclude undesirable features and advertisements from their columns, and have had to face the question of existence with them, or failure without them. To these life has for the most part seemed the greater necessity. No paper, so far as we know, has announced its intention of refusing all advertisements. Our advertisement manager is of opinion that in certain cases we do something almost equivalent.

This week we have agreed to a compact with that gentleman and his collaborator. If they will avoid inserting merely a list of titles, authors, and publishers, some of which would undoubtedly convey no information to our readers, we will not say too exactly what we think of those publishers who expect everything for nothing.

It appears useless to point out to such gentlemen that we have employed and paid erudite and capable men to criticize their wares, and that they have been glad to transfer to advertisements our words of praise, often abruptly torn from their context.

"Give us your applause, for that is always just," was the amended tag that, to the amusement of Dickens, ended a performance of 'The Castle Spectre.' "Give us always your applause, when we advertise with you," ought to be an equally comic proposition. It reduces the whole business of criticism to a commercial level, in which the real value of a book for the reader is a secondary consideration. Of course, there are publishers and publishers, just as there are various sorts of authors. We receive from time to time a welcome recognition that a review by no means wholly laudatory is the fairest that has appeared, and publishers and authors are well aware that our columns are open for corrections, if they feel aggrieved. The surprise frequently expressed at the mere fact of such protests getting into print is significant of the practices of to-day. Reviewers are human like other people, and liable to error, but we have always striven to secure fair judgment. Doubtless Martin Tupper's publishers were surprised and annoyed when we refused to join in the general chorus praising his egregious works, and more modern instances could be supplied. But it seems to us that, if our criticism with all its limitations is founded on knowledge and a standard worthy of a great literature, we deserve to maintain our independence. The word is out of fashion alike in politics and literature, but there are signs all around us of revolt against the leadership of the money-maker and the opportunist. The fight is not easy; the big battalions are strong; but we are not yet prepared to say with Matthew Arnold's defeated hero:—

Let the long contention cease!
Geese are swans, and swans are geese.

Theology.

Christianity and Ethics. By DR. ARCHIBALD B. D. ALEXANDER. (Duckworth.)—An addition to the "Studies in Theology" series.

From the Sepulchre to the Throne. By MADAME CECILIA. (Burns & Oates.)—Deals with the Resurrection of our Lord, and with the events of the Great Forty Days. Side-lights of topography and Jewish customs have been thrown upon the Gospel narrative.

Joshua. By S. HOLMES. (Cambridge University Press.)—A linguistic study in which the Hebrew and Greek texts are compared.

Judaism and Saint Paul. By C. G. MONTEFIORE. (Max Goschen.)—This volume contains two essays: one on 'The Genesis of the Religion of Saint Paul,' the second on 'The Relation of Saint Paul to Liberal Judaism.'

Life's Compass. (Headley Bros.)—A new anthology by the compiler of 'The Pilot.' The theme is St. Mark's record of the life of Christ, and there are epigrams, anecdotes, &c., arranged for daily reading. The book is illustrated.

Making up Your Mind. By FATHER ADDERLEY. (Wells Gardner.)—A volume of studies on matters for thought and prayer in the application of the Christian faith to everyday life.

Nestorius and his Place in the History of Christian Doctrine. By PROF. FRIEDRICH LOOPS. (Cambridge University Press.)—Four lectures given in a course of advanced theology at the University of London.

Saint Augustin. By LOUIS BERTRAND. Translated by VINCENT O'SULLIVAN. (Constable.)—M. Bertrand's work is, no doubt, familiar to most of those who are interested in Northern Africa and the Levant. They will be glad to think that his 'Saint Augustin' is to be made accessible to readers who would not be able to enjoy it in French.

Spiritual Reformers in the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries. By PROF. RUFUS M. JONES. (Macmillan.)—That Prof. Jones covers a wide field will be gathered from a glance at his chapter-headings, which include: Hans Denck and the Inward Word; Sebastian Franck, an Apostle of Inward Religion; Sebastian Castellio, a Forgotten Prophet; Coornhert and the Collegiants—A Movement for Spiritual Religion in Holland; Valentine Weigel and Nature Mysticism; Jacob Boehme, his Life and Spirit; Early English Interpreters of Spiritual Religion—John Everard, Giles Randall, and Others; and John Smith, Platonist, "an Interpreter of the Spirit."

The Bible of To-day. By the REV. ALBAN BLAKISTON. (Cambridge University Press.)—This book is designed to introduce the student of the Bible to the historical or critical method of studying the Scriptures and investigating their messages.

The Canticles of the Christian Church, Eastern and Western, in Early and Mediæval Times. By the REV. JAMES MEARNS. (Cambridge University Press.)—This sketch is believed to be the first attempt in any language to cover the whole field of investigation. It is based throughout upon the manuscripts, the materials having taken several years to collect and classify.

The Offices of Baptism and Confirmation. By T. THOMPSON. (Cambridge University Press.)—An addition to the "Handbooks of Liturgical Study."

The Poem of Job. By DR. E. G. KING. (Cambridge University Press.)—An English translation in the metre of the original poem, according to the principle of accented syllables.

Thirsting after God, and Other Bible Readings. By DANIEL CRAWFORD. (Morgan & Scott.)—The author of this series of studies has lived for many years in Central Africa, and is now lecturing in the United States. The book will be published next week in London and New York.

Thoughts on Penance. By the REV. PREBENDARY DENISON. (Robert Scott.)—The purpose of this book is to set forth the fact that "penance represents in a fallen world the right attitude of creaturely life towards its Creator."

Poetry.

Ball-Room Ballads. By K. L. ORDE. (Max Goschen.)—A volume of light verse dealing with the Tango and other fashionable crazes of the moment. Illustrated by S. L. VERE.

Collected Poems. By FORD MADOX HUEFFER. (Max Goschen.)—A Library edition of Mr. Hueffer's poetry, with Preface by the author.

Side-Slips. By J. GRIFFYTH FAIRFAX. (Max Goschen.)—A volume of humorous verse illustrated in silhouette by MAUD KLEIN.

The Winged Anthology. (John Richmond.)—A collection of poems dealing with birds and butterflies from 1536 to the present moment. Among the living poets whose work is included are Mr. Austin Dobson, Mr. Thomas Hardy, and Mr. William Canton.

Voices of Womanhood. By ETHEL CARNIE. (Headley Bros.)—Miss Carnie strives in these verses to give poetic expression to the hopes and aspirations of present-day women.

Bibliography.

Bibliography of Oscar Wilde. By STUART MASON. (Werner Laurie.)—Includes a complete list of Wilde's anonymous contributions to the press, several of which are here reprinted for the first time. It contains also the unpublished scenario of the lost play 'The Cardinal of Avignon,' and the suppressed dedication to 'The Ballad of Reading Gaol.' Mr. Robert Ross contributes an Introductory Note.

Conspectus Incunabulorum. By R. A. PEDDIE. Part II. (Grafton & Co.)—A catalogue of all known works printed before the year 1501, and should prove valuable to those who handle early printed books. The part of the work now announced includes entries from C to G.

Philosophy.

Philosophy: What is It? By DR. F. B. JEVONS. (Cambridge University Press.)—Based upon lectures given to members of the Workers' Educational Association. The style is not technical, and throughout the book Dr. Jevons endeavours to consider the problems of Philosophy strictly from the point of view of the plain man, and to convince him that Philosophy is concerned with practical life, and not a monopoly of the student.

The History of Greek Philosophy. By JOHN BURNET. (Macmillan.)—This work forms the second volume of "The Schools of Philosophy," a history of the evolution of philosophic thought, written by various writers, and edited by SIR HENRY JONES.

The Philosophy of Biology. By JAMES JOHNSTONE. (Cambridge University Press.)—Deals largely with the philosophies of Driesch and Bergson.

History and Biography.

A History of the French People. By HILAIRE BELLOC. Illustrated with Maps and Plans. (Chapman & Hall.)—This work is to be complete in three volumes, the first dealing with the 'Foundations,' and reaching to the coronation of Hugh Capet; the second with the 'Middle Ages,' ending with the first years of the sixteenth century; and the third with 'The Modern State.' It will be divided into short sections dealing with the chief events of the national history. Tables of dates, of genealogy, and of comparative events will be added; and particular attention will be given to military history.

A Life of Mrs. Jordan. By CLARE JERROLD. (Nash.)—Contains much new matter, and will be illustrated from contemporary prints from the collection of Mr. A. M. Broadley. Mrs. Jerrold has had access to a mass of family papers and many of the actress's letters.

A Martyr of Love. By CLAUDE FÉVAL. Translated from the French by SIDNEY DARK. (Stanley Paul.)—A life of Louise de la Vallière, with an Introduction by JEAN RICHELIEU.

A Volume of Reminiscences. By F. C. PHILIPS. (Nash.)—Mr. Philips has had a varied career. Starting life in the Guards, he acted as diplomat, barrister, leader-writer, war correspondent, novelist, playwright, and theatrical manager. He has met many interesting and famous people, of whom he relates a great number of anecdotes in his book.

Campan's Private Life of Marie Antoinette, with an Introduction by DR. HOLLAND ROSE; Lockhart's Life of Burns, with an Introduction by SIR WALTER RALEIGH. (Liverpool, Henry Young.)—Two choice editions of well-known works which seem worth the bibliophile's attention. In both cases the issue is limited, the copies being signed and numbered. The 'Life of Burns' contains reproductions of certain portraits which have not been published before.

Elizabeth and Mary Stuart. By FRANK ARTHUR MUMBY. (Constable.)—A companion volume to the author's 'The Girlhood of Queen Elizabeth,' continuing the narrative, as far as possible in contemporary letters, through the first phase of Elizabeth's rivalry with Mary Stuart. Mr. Mumby traces the origin of the feud and the secret history of the events which led up to Mary's marriage with Darnley.

Fair Ladies of the Winter Palace. By DR. A. S. RAPPOPORT. (Holden & Hardingham.)—Deals with the Court of the Romanoffs. The author has also aimed at delineating the history of woman in Russia.

France from behind the Veil. By COUNT PAUL VASSILI. (Cassell.)—In this volume the author embodies his experiences of the inner social and political life of France during the last fifty years. His reminiscences range from the reign of Napoleon III. and the Empress Eugénie to the present day.

From the Crusades to the French Revolution. By WINIFRED STEPHENS. (Constable.)—Miss Stephens has here a good subject for a pen which has already won respect in the history of the La Trémoille family.

Harrington and his Oceana. By H. F. RUSSELL-SMITH. (Cambridge University Press.)—The political theories of James Harrington are here examined, with special reference to their connexion with the American constitution.

History of the Reign of Henry V. By J. H. WYLIE. (Cambridge University Press.)—A companion volume to the author's 'History of Henry IV.' The work will probably be completed in four volumes, the first of which (1413-15) is nearly ready.

My Bohemian Days in London. By JULIUS M. PRICE. (Werner Laurie.)—Mr. Price is a war artist and correspondent of The Illustrated London News. He had ten years of studio life in St. John's Wood.

Napoleon in Exile at Elba (1814-15). By NORWOOD YOUNG. (Stanley Paul.)—Mr. Young made two special journeys to Elba and St. Helena in order to acquire information for this book. There is a chapter on the Iconography of Napoleon at Elba by Mr. A. M. Broadley.

Notable Women in History. By WILLIS J. ABBOT. (Greening.)—The author discusses the various parts played by women in history, from Cleopatra to Mrs. Eddy.

Notes of a Son and Brother. By HENRY JAMES. (Macmillan.)—The second part of what may be described as Mr. James's autobiography, the first volume of which appeared last spring under the title of 'A Small Boy and Others.'

Personal Recollections of Vincent van Gogh. By ELISABETH DU QUESNE VAN GOGH. Translated by KATHERINE S. DREIER. (Constable.)—The complement of the 'Letters,' which were published last year.

Recollections of Sixty Years. By RIGHT HON. SIR CHARLES TUPPER. (Cassell.)—Reminiscences of a long period of activity in Canadian affairs. Sir Charles Tupper's "recollections" go back to pre-Federation days, when each Province went its own way without regard to its neighbours. Letters written by Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, Earl Grey, Sir J. A. Macdonald, and other prominent politicians will be included in the volume.

The Autobiography of Maharshi Devendranath Tagore. Translated from the Original Bengali by SATYENDRANATH TAGORE and INDIRA DEVI. (Macmillan.)—The writer of this autobiography is the father of Rabindranath Tagore. There are portraits, and an Introduction by EVELYN UNDERHILL.

The Hero of Brittany: Armand de Chateaubriand, Correspondent of the Princes between France and England, 1768-1809. By E. HERPIN. Translated by MRS. COLQUHOUN GRANT. (Mills & Boon.)—The subject of this memoir was the cousin of René de Chateaubriand, and the book presents a picture of Brittany during and after the Revolution. The opening pages describe St. Malo in the middle of the eighteenth century, and give an account of the corsair shipowners who traded there, and from whom the Chateaubriands descended.

The Life of George Müller. By WILLIAM HENRY HARDING. (Morgan & Scott.)—A study of the personality of the founder of the Orphan Homes at Bristol. Many interesting Early-Victorian movements are dealt with, and the volume contains a coloured reproduction of an oil painting of Müller in the possession of the author.

The Loves of the Poets and the Painters. By "LE PETIT HOMME ROUGE" (ERNEST A. VIZETELLY). (Holden & Hardingham.)—Mr. Vizetelly here makes further excursions into the realm of romantic biography which he has explored in his previous books. The subject he has chosen is one which is likely to be popular.

The Official Life of King George of Greece. By CAPT. WALTER CHRISTMAS. (Nash.)—Dedicated, by special permission, to Queen Alexandra, who has supplied photographs to illustrate it. King George himself has read and approved the final proof-sheets.

Through Two Wars, a Story of Macedonian Strife. By W. H. CRAWFORD PRICE. (Werner Laurie.)—A study of the Balkan Wars of 1912-13. The author does not profess to offer a wealth of military detail, but rather to present a popular account of the events which have made the past four years in Macedonia of outstanding importance.

Twenty Years of my Life. By DOUGLAS SLADEN. (Constable.)—Mr. Sladen's book is likely to provide entertainment congenial to a large number of readers, since he has been in many places and talked with many people.

Geography and Travel.

A Woman in China. By MARY GAUNT. (Werner Laurie.)—A new travel-book by the author of 'Alone in West Africa.'

African Camp Fires. By STEWART EDWARD WHITE. (Nelson.)—Mr. White here describes, rather from a traveller's than a hunter's point of view, the landscape and peoples of East Africa.

Eight Years in Germany. By I. A. R. WYLIE. (Mills & Boon.)—The fact that 'My German Year' was so well received has induced the author to write a new book on German life, in the hope that it will form some contribution towards a better understanding between that country and ourselves.

La Missione Franchetti in Tripolitana. (Turin, Fratelli Treves.)—Gives a detailed description of Libya in its different aspects, written by specialists.

Life in an Indian Outpost. By MAJOR CASSERLY. (Werner Laurie.)—An account of the life of an Indian officer in command of a native garrison in a small post on the frontier.

Morocco. By PIERRE LOTI. Translated by W. P. BAINES. (Werner Laurie.)—Pierre Loti was a member of a diplomatic mission to the Sultan of Morocco at Fez, and in this book he gives an account of the journey and of Fez itself.

The Amazing Argentine, a New Land of Enterprise. By JOHN FOSTER FRASER. (Cassell.)—Last autumn Mr. Foster Fraser made a special visit to the Argentine to gather material for this book, which is written in a popular vein. Besides describing the development of the country, he tells of life amongst the Spanish-Italian population, and deals with British enterprise.

The Eastern Libyans: an Essay. By ORIC BATES. (Macmillan.)—The material from which this volume is formed was collected for inclusion in a history of Cyrenaica upon which Mr. Bates is engaged. Finding, however, that his Libyan notes had grown so greatly in magnitude that they would constitute a disproportionately large feature of the book, he decided to publish them separately. He has aimed at providing a scientific basis for further study of the Libyans east of Africa Minor.

The Land of Open Doors. By J. BURGON BICKERSTETH. (Wells Gardner.)—Mr. Bickersteth spent two years in Canada as a layman on the staff of the Archbishops' mission at Edmonton, and had unique opportunities of seeing at first-hand two main features of development: the breaking of virgin soil by immigrants, and the construction of the great trans-continental railway across the Rockies. Incidentally, he reveals something of the courage and endurance needed not only by settlers, but also by such workers as himself. There are numerous photographs, most of them taken by the author.

The Night Side of Japan. By T. FUJIMOTO. (Werner Laurie.)—An account of modern life in Japan. The theatres, variety halls, streets, and parks are described from the Japanese point of view. The author is a native of Tokyo.

The Orient Express. By ARTHUR MOORE. (Constable.)—Under this title Mr. Moore, who has been correspondent for The Times in Persia and the Near East, is publishing a record of his experiences. The list of chapter-headings goes to show that his range of interest is wide.

The Panama Canal. By F. J. HASKIN. (Heinemann.)—A semi-official account of the making of the great canal. The author gives an account of the difficulties that had to be overcome, the life of the workers, and the financial questions arising out of the completion of the project.

The Pursuit of Spring. By EDWARD THOMAS. (Nelson.)—A volume of sketches describing a walking tour from London to the Quantocks.

The Real Mexico. By HAMILTON FYFE. (Heinemann.)—Mr. Fyfe spent last autumn in Mexico, and gives here a picture of that country torn by civil war, and an explanation of the causes that led up to it.

The Wilds of Maoriland. By J. MACKINTOSH BELL. (Macmillan.)—Mr. Bell was for six years Director of New Zealand's Geological Survey, and during this time of almost constant travel his work and the love of exploration led him into many little-visited corners of the country. He has written this book in the hope of encouraging the stranger to visit the less well-known regions, as well as the large towns. The volume concludes with a description of the geography and climate of New Zealand.

Through the South Seas with Jack London. By MARTIN JOHNSON. (Werner Laurie.)—Mr. Johnson was the successful candidate for the post of cook on Jack London's ketch the Snark, and gives here his impressions of the voyage. There are numerous illustrations from photographs taken by the author.

Through Unknown Nigeria. By JOHN R. RAPHAEL. (Werner Laurie.)—The narrative of a journey through the latest British possession, including a description of a 400-mile voyage down the Niger.

Sport.

How to Become an Alpinist. By F. BURLINGHAM. (Werner Laurie.)—Gives the necessary information as to setting about the pastime in a proper and workmanlike way.

Sociology.

Marriage Ceremonies in Morocco. By EDWARD WESTERMARCK. (Macmillan.)—Dr. Westermarck has studied this subject among the people themselves. He has made fifteen journeys to Morocco, and was accompanied through the country by a Moorish friend. He intends this book to remedy an omission in his 'History of Human Marriage,' in which, he says, he accorded too little space to marriage ceremonies.

The Cure for Poverty. By JOHN CALVIN BROWN. (Stanley Paul.)—The author, who has had many years of commercial experience in this country, the United States, and on the Continent, reviews industrial reforms.

Woman under Polygamy. By WALTER M. GALLICHAH. (Holden & Hardingham.)—A survey of plural marriage as practised today in the East and under the Mohammedan faith. The subject is treated especially in regard to the position of women in the harem and the zenana, and the author has collected the opinions and the testimony of women possessing an intimate knowledge of polygamy in its domestic and social aspects. The introductory section of the work treats of the biological origin of polygamy, and the inquiry traces the system from primitive people to cultured modern races.

Economics.

The Ownership, Tenure, and Taxation of Land: some Facts and Fallacies in connexion therewith. By SIR THOMAS P. WHITTAKER. (Macmillan.)—An attempt to bring together such statistical and historical information as is available, and a discussion of it, and of the economic, fiscal, and ethical principles and problems which bear upon the two distinct and limited subjects—the ownership and taxation of land.

Education.

The Thinking Hand. By J. G. LEGGE. (Macmillan.)—The subject dealt with in Mr. Legge's volume is one of growing interest to all those who are engaged in the work of education, viz., the development of a manual side in the activities of our elementary schools. It describes the movement as it displays itself in the schools of Liverpool.

Philology.

C. Juli Caesaris Commentarii rerum in Gallia gestarum. (Lee Warner.)—A new volume in the "Scriptorum Classicorum Bibliotheca Riccardiana," which has the advantage of being set, by special permission, from the new text prepared for the Clarendon Press by Dr. T. Rice Holmes.

School-Books.

A Short History of Modern Europe from 1558. By DR. J. E. MORRIS. (Cambridge University Press.)—Intended for school use, and particularly for boys preparing for the Army and Civil Service Entrance Examinations. It aims specially at showing how closely the history of Britain has been bound up with that of the Continental States.

Applied Mechanics and Heat Engines, First Year's Course. By ALFRED COULSON. "Union Series." (Mills & Boon.)—In the opinion of the author the subjects of Applied Mechanics and Heat Engines should be taught concurrently, and his book is written from that point of view. It will be completed in three parts, each of which represents one year's work.

Cassell's "Modern School" Series: LITERATURE SECTION.—The editor of this new series of Literature Readers has endeavoured to provide a carefully graduated course containing such selections of the masterpieces of English literature as may create in the minds of young people a liking for the better kind of reading. In the Junior books the stories are classical and traditional, but the later books provide a child's anthology of literature. The extracts are arranged chronologically, each selection being preceded by a biographical note. The books are similar in format to the Geographical Books of the publishers' "Modern School" Series; they are printed upon special hard-pressed, unglazed paper; the type used has been carefully selected, and each contains numerous coloured and black-and-white illustrations.

First Union Botany. By E. M. GODDARD. "Union Series." (Mills & Boon.)—This book, which covers the syllabus of the Oxford and Cambridge Junior Local Examinations, is designed to provide a sound scientific training in botany for Middle Forms. The life and structure of the plant are dealt with side by side, and the experiments, which can be performed by ordinary classes, follow one another in logical sequence.

Francis Chantrey: Donkey Boy and Sculptor. By HAROLD ARMITAGE. (Mills & Boon.)—A Reader for upper standards.

Introductory Practical Mathematics for Elementary Schools. By W. E. HARRISON. "Union Series." (Mills & Boon.)—A course for upper standards, adapted from the author's 'Practical Mathematics for Preliminary Students.'

Perse Playbooks, No. 4 (Cambridge, Heffer), consists mainly of prose studies by junior boys. The first half of the book is taken up with an essay by the editor on 'The Play Way,' in which he gives a full account of the actual methods used in the classroom at the Perse School to encourage the boys to express themselves in prose.

Poetry for Boys. By S. MAXWELL. (Mills & Boon.)—A new collection of poems for boys' schools, printed in large type to conform with the requirements of the British Association Eyesight Report.

Six Contes de Guy de Maupassant. Edited by H. N. P. SLOMAN. (Cambridge University Press.)—The first volume of "The Cambridge Modern French Series." The aim of the series is to offer teachers French texts, valuable for their subject-matter, attractive in style, and equipped with exercises such as teachers who follow the Direct Method have usually been obliged to compile for themselves.

Stinde's Die Familie Buchholz. Edited by G. H. CLARKE. (Cambridge University Press.)—A volume in "The Cambridge Modern German Series." This series is primarily intended for use on the Direct Method by pupils who have completed at least their first course in German. Each volume will contain a short sketch of the life and works of the author, with questions on the narrative, grammatical exercises, and subjects and outlines for free composition.

Literary Criticism.

The Theory of Poetry in England, its Development in Doctrines and Ideas from the Sixteenth Century to the Nineteenth Century. By PROF. R. P. COWL. (Macmillan.)—Presents the fundamental positions of poetic theory and criticism, by means of a collection of the utterances of great critics and writers, arranged under such headings as 'Theory of Poetic Creation,' 'Poetry as an Imitative Art,' and 'Functions of Metre.' A brief marginal commentary accompanies the text.

Lectures on Dryden. By the late DR. VERRALL. (Cambridge University Press.)—The last course of lectures given by Dr. Verrall as King Edward VII. Professor of English Literature. Edited by MRS. VERRALL.

Fiction.

A Mother in Exile. (Everett.)—The story of a wife deserted by her husband, and a mother robbed of her children, culminating in a tragedy.

Bedesman 4. By MRS. SKRINE. (Duckworth.)—An addition to the "Road-mender" series.

Bombay Edition of the Works of Rudyard Kipling. (Macmillan.)—Vols. XIII. and XIV., 'The Day's Work' and 'Stalky & Co.', will be published during April.

By the Waters of Germany. By NORMA LORIMER. (Stanley Paul.)—An account of a holiday among the fine old towns that overlook the waters of Germany with a love-interest interwoven.

Full Swing. By FRANK DANBY. (Cassell.)—An intimate study of a woman's character.

Leviathan. By JEANETTE MARKS. (Hodder & Stoughton.)—A brilliant young professor, about to be married, finds himself in the grip of the drug habit. The story concerns his efforts to conquer it.

Limelight. By HORACE WYNDHAM. (John Richmond.)—Treats of the stage, chiefly of the vicissitudes of provincial touring, and also of music-hall work. The announcement we have seen carefully states that, while the characters are types, they are not "portraits."

Outa Karel's Stories. By SANMI METELER-KAMP. (Macmillan.)—Folk-tales about animals told by an old Hottentot to his master's children. The chief characters are the lion and the jackal.

Princes of the Stock Exchange. By NEMIROVICH DANCHENKA. Translated by DR. A. S. RAPPOPORT. (Holden & Hardingham.)—The heroine is described as a Jeanne d'Arc of the Stock Exchange, and the story deals with the nefarious activities of financiers.

Reality. By OLIVE WADSWLEY. (Cassell.)—The theme of Miss Wadswley's new novel is the artistic temperament in marriage.

Rung Ho! By TALBOT MUNDY. (Cassell.)—A story of the outbreak of the Indian Mutiny.

Scottish Stories. By R. B. CUNNINGHAM GRAHAM. (Duckworth.)—A selection from the author's books, to be published at a popular price.

Tales of Two Countries. By MAXIM GORKY. (Werner Laurie.)—A new collection of short stories, mostly dealing with Russian and Italian peasant life.

That Strange Affair. By WALTER BRÜGGE-VALLON. (Stanley Paul.)—A colonel, a detective, the heroine, and a Chinaman are involved in clearing up this "strange affair," which concerns the s.s. King Malcolm.

The Black Peril. By GEORGE WEBB HARDY. (Holden & Hardingham.)—A novel dealing with the relations between the black and white races.

The Chief of the Ranges. By H. A. CODY. (Hodder & Stoughton.)—The scene of this novel is laid in the Yukon, before the invasion of the white man. It is a story of Indians and traders, and has as its leading character the daughter of the chief of a minor tribe. Mr. Cody lived for many years in the country of which he writes.

The Crimson Mascot. By CHARLES E. PEARSE. (Stanley Paul.)—The mascot is a remarkable crimson pearl which has an important place in the lives of a number of the characters.

The Cuckoo Lamb. By HORACE W. C. NEWTE. (Chatto & Windus.)—Mr. Newte's new novel will deal with artistic life in London, the suburbs, and the country.

The Escape of Mr. Trimm. By IRVIN S. COBB. (Hodder & Stoughton.)—A collection of short stories, the prevailing note of which is comedy.

The Gates of Doom. By RAFAEL SABATINI. (Stanley Paul.)—An early Georgian historical romance.

The King of Alsander. By JAMES ELROY FLECKER. (Max Goschen.)—Admirers of Mr. Flecker's verse will learn with interest that this is his first novel, and that it is described as "a fantastic romance."

The Land of the Lotus, by MRS. J. T. GRAHAM (J. W. Arrowsmith), depicts the curious and unexpected incidents that occurred in the life of an English lady in India.

The Red Virgin. By G. FREDERICK TURNER. (Hodder & Stoughton.)—Into this story of the struggle for the throne of Grimland the author has introduced, under fanciful names, places and personages connected with present-day movements in Great Britain and on the Continent.

The World Set Free, a Story of Mankind. By H. G. WELLS. (Macmillan.)—One of Mr. Wells's imaginative and prophetic romances. It is at present appearing in The English Review, and is promised in book-form in May.

Under the Incense Trees. By CECIL ADAIR. (Stanley Paul.)—A love-story of two generations.

Wessex Edition of the Works of Thomas Hardy: Vol. XVIII. A Changed Man, The Waiting Supper, and Other Tales, concluding with The Romantic Adventures of a Milkmaid. (Macmillan.)—This volume, already issued in another form, is to be added to the excellent Wessex set of Mr. Hardy's books.

Where Pharaoh Dreams. By MRS. IRENE OSGOOD. (John Richmond.)—The scene of Mrs. Osgood's new novel is laid, as the title implies, in Egypt. It has illustrations by MR. W. GORDON MEIN, and a Foreword by MR. STEPHEN PHILLIPS.

Juvenile.

The Bankside Shakespeare for Children: The Merchant of Venice; A Midsummer Night's Dream; Richard II. (Wells Gardner.)—Three additional volumes in this useful series. The publishers desire it to be known that the version of 'A Midsummer Night's Dream' was planned and prepared long before Mr. Granville Barker's production and acting version were announced.

[Owing to the late receipt of information concerning forthcoming works, we find ourselves obliged to issue only half of our Supplement with the present number.]
